CANCER Answer line

American Cancer Society

A regular feature, prepared by the American Cancer Society, to help save your life from cancer.

A bookkeeper writes: "My older sister has advanced cancer. No one in the family really knows how to act with her. Should we be sympathetic or pretend that nothing is wrong?"

ANSWERline: If you are close to someone who has cancer it may be difficult to communicate easily for a while. Either you or your sister may not want to talk about her illness – and your sister may or may not want sympathy. It is, however, the opinion of experts that openness and contact are usually the ways of overcoming the isolation sometimes suffered by people with cancer. It has been noted, for example, that human beings may fear abandonment even more than they fear death. To improve your ability to communicate comfortably with your sister you might read, "Listen With Your Heart," a new pamphlet available at no cost from your nearest American Cancer Society Unit. In it you will find information about ways of coping at this difficult time.

A pregnant woman asks: "If I nurse my baby, will it protect me against developing breast cancer later in my life?"

ANSWERline: The idea that breast feeding may have a protective effect against breast cancer has raised interest for many years, but no conclusive evidence has been produced. In a recent study done by the American Health Foundation under sponsorship of the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute, the health histories of groups of New York City women from 1969-75 were analyzed, and no such protective effect was documented. It was noted that if nursing were a crucial determinant of whether or not a woman gets breast cancer, there should be a sharp increase in breast cancer incidence in Western countries, where nursing has decreased. This has not occurred.

A 52-year-old sales executive writes: "What do you suggest that men of my age do to protect themselves against cancer?"

ANSWERline: There are five ways to help yourself: (1) have a physical checkup on a schedule your doctor recommends; (2) if you smoke cigarettes, quit; (3) arrange with your physician for simple tests for colorectal cancer; (4) have a prostate examination as part of your physical checkup; (5) if you notice any of cancer's warning signals see your physician right away. For a list of these signals, ask your nearest American Cancer Society Unit for a free leaflet: "Cancer Facts for Men."

Take care of your tires.

At any speed, a tire failure can be hazardous. You have an obligation to yourself, your family and other drivers to prevent tire-failure accidents.

Be on the lookout for possible trouble — cuts, cracks, uneven wear, cupping and inflation problems. Rotate tires every 5,000 miles. Inspect them often; remove rocks, nails or glass that is jammed between tread grooves.

Most important, don't drive on tires you aren't sure of.
